

Cookie Policy

IP ADDRESSES AND COOKIES

We may collect certain information about your computer—such as your IP address (where available), operating system, and browser type—for the purposes of system administration and reporting aggregate data to our advertisers. This information is purely statistical and relates to users' browsing behaviours and patterns. It does not identify individuals, and we do not use it to collect personal data.

Additionally, we may gather information about your general internet usage through the use of cookies, which are stored on your computer's hard drive. Cookies contain data that is transferred to your device and help us enhance our website by providing a more personalised and improved user experience. They enable us to:

- To store information about your preferences, enabling us to tailor the site to your individual interests.
- To enhance the speed and efficiency of your searches.
- To recognise you when you return to our website.
- To estimate the size of our audience and analyse usage patterns.

You can choose to refuse cookies by adjusting the settings on your browser to block them. However, please note that doing so may restrict access to certain features or areas of our site. Unless you have configured your browser to reject cookies, our system will automatically issue them when you visit our website.